

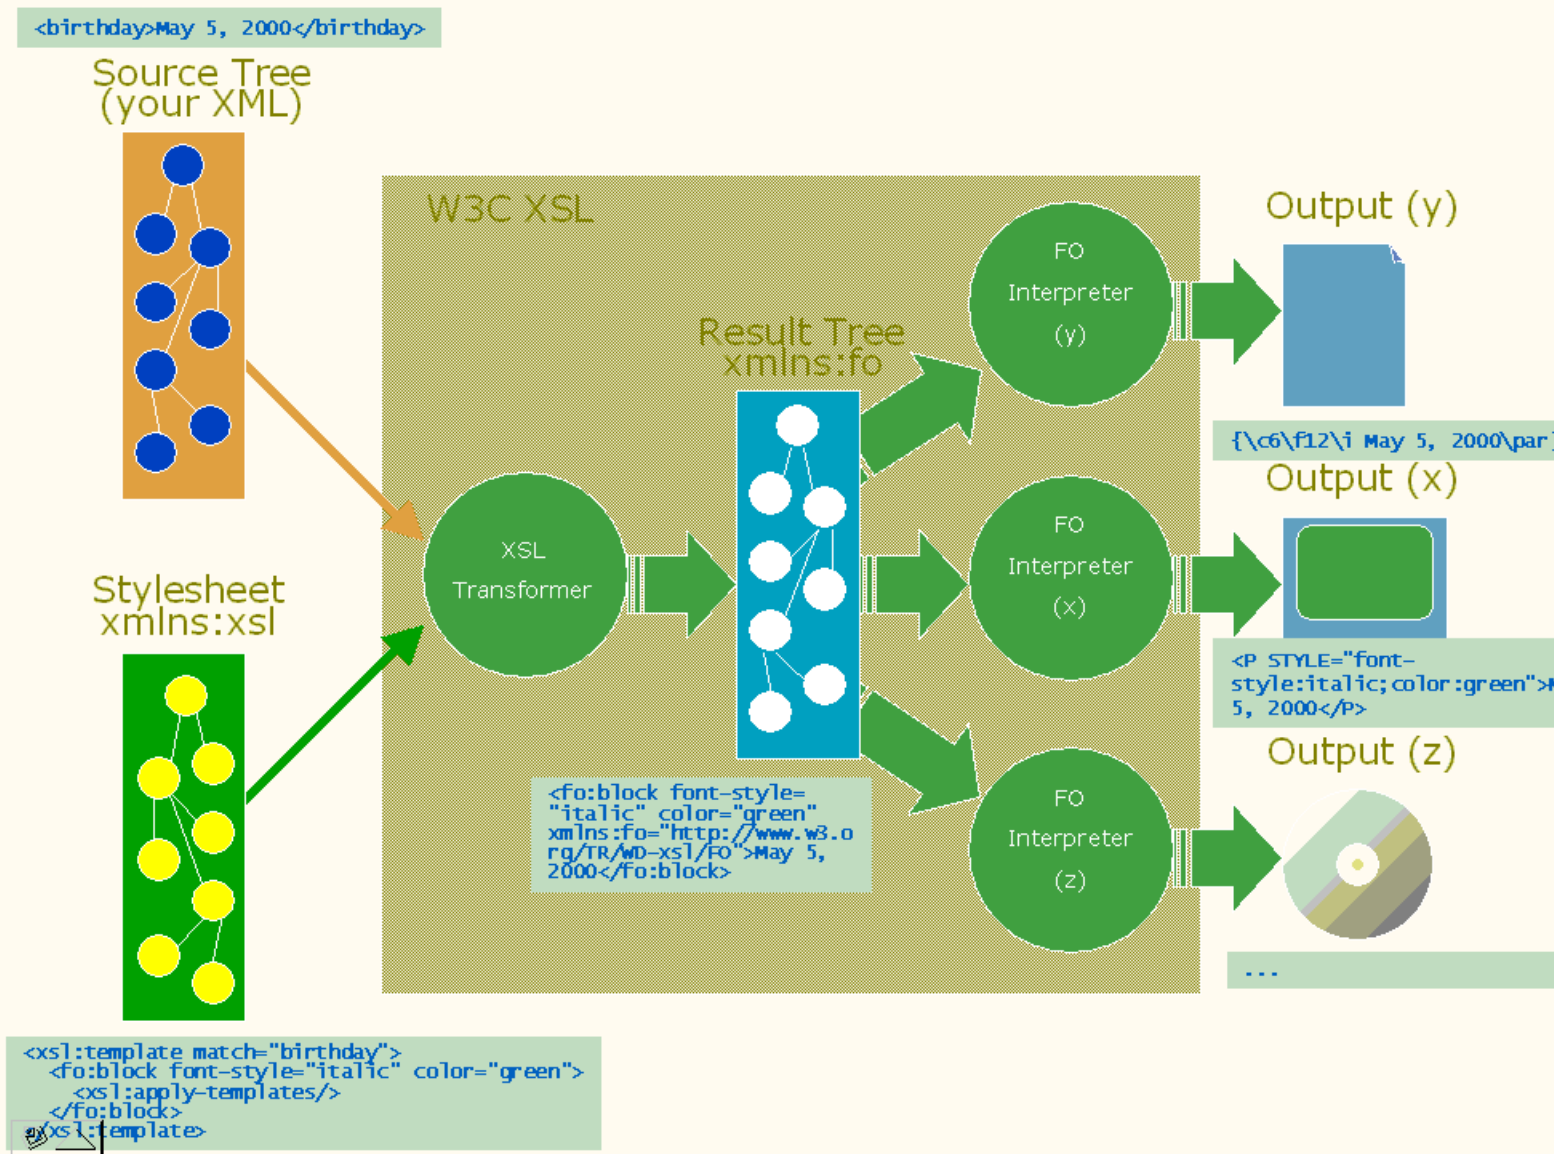

Figure 1: The two parts of the W3C XSL presentation process: First the input XML document is transformed into a result tree, and then the result tree is interpreted by a formatting object interpreter optimized for a particular output.